

Question: Combine or Skills Camp?

Answer:

On June 14 there is an Upstate NY Combine at Ithaca College, 80 players from the Blue Chip Combine were selected to attend. I don't know who they were as they were selected by a committee from Upstate NY, however if you were selected you should have been contacted by them.

On the same date June 14 the Suffolk County Coaches Association is running a Skills Camp Showcase at Sachem North HS. Information regarding that event is located on the Events on this website. The fee for the skills camp is $130 for pre- registration or $150 the day of the event registration. If you attended the Blue Chip Combine you were given a $10 Coupon toward this skills camp.

Everyone should do one Combine a year to see how you stack up against other players however College Coaches can't attend unless they are from a DIII or Junior College. If you plan on going to the Ithaca College Combine, you will be competing in the same events that you did for the Blue Chip Combine minus the Bench Presses.

The Skills Camp Showcase is a camp and thus College Coaches can attend and help you with your Skills and hopefully invite you to their on campus one day events that may lead to an offer to their College/University. In the long run this is what you want as a player because most College Coaches will not give you an offer unless they see you perform on their campus.

Hopefully this helps you make a decision on whether to go to another Combine or come to the Skills Camp. If you have any questions you can reach out to me either through email or phone.
